

Abstract

A part tracking system has a tester and a part tracking device. The part tracking device is an electronic device that identifies the part with a unique signal. The part 5 tracking device has a power source or an inductor which is connected to a filter. The filter is connected to a signal generator that creates a signal and sends the signal to a testing unit to determine whether the correct signal was created by the part tracking device.